Police services remain closed at Naha and Kukum Police Stations

Police stations at Naha and Kukum remain closed to residents as a result of the recent social unrest.

Communities from these areas who need to access police services are advised to attend Central Police Station until further notice.

Royal Solomon Islands Police Force (RSIPF) Supervising Provincial Police Commander (PPC) Central police station, Superintendent Jimson Robo said these affected communities should use Central Police Station to access police services until normal operations are restored at Naha and Kukum police stations.

PPC Robo said for any traffic-related cases, it was advisable to come and see our Traffic officers based at Central Police Station.

You can call Central Police on phone 22999 or 24433. RSIPF is working behind the scenes to move the Traffic officers down to Central Police Station as a priority.
